

President's Report

Building Project

The Accessibility Project is moving forward nicely and I thank the college community for its cooperation and goodwill in making the necessary adjustments to enable construction over the summer months.

Academic Vision

The strategic academic planning committee has met and I encourage them in their work as they discern a strategic academic plan for the college. This is very important work in terms of how we present the college to the wider world and how we plan for the future of our academic mission at the college.

Jesuit Networks

Jesuit novice Richard Mulrooney is currently in Regina until May to work at Mother Teresa Middle School as part of his training. Welcome Richard! We also look forward to welcoming Pat Twohy to our campus on March 14-17. Pat has spent most of his Jesuit life working with Indigenous groups in Oregon and Washington states. He will be accompanied by Cristina Roberts, head of Indigenization at Seattle University, who will share with us her efforts in this regard at a Jesuit partner institution. We look forward to welcoming four Jesuit scholastics to Regina for the Indigenous immersion experience in May/June. I will represent the college at the AJCU (Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities) meeting in Washington, DC on January 29-30.

Relations with Indigenous Peoples

The Advisory Circle on Indigenous Relations met on Friday, Jan. 22 and is preparing a college-specific response to the TRC recommendation. Also, Philip Shano, SJ, the Jesuit assistant for Indigenous relations, will visit Regina in April.

Relations with Archdiocese

We note with sadness the passing of Daniel Bohan, the Archbishop of Regina, who has served in that capacity since 2005. Several members of the college represented Campion at his funeral Mass on Friday, January 22. On January 11, we hosted a lunch for the priests of the Archdiocese, giving us a chance to let them know what the college is doing so that they can communicate this in their parishes. I also met with Catholic Connections on Monday, January 25, to see how the various Catholic bodies in Regina can enhance our collaboration.
